As many as 135 students took the Nightingale Oath on the occasion. Chief guest of the function Mrs Selma Thomas, Deputy Nursing Superintendent, Sri Ramachandra Medical College and Hospital, said that nursing is the most wanted and trusted profession. More than ever, the importance of nurses was felt during the New Covid-19 pandemic when hospitalized patients could not keep any attenders. Therefore, the nurses had to attend to all their needs. Nurses could continue communicating with ICU patients even if they do not respond. Once they get well, they would definitely remember the encouraging words of nurses. There are three types of patients: a) those who get cured and go home, b) those who come repeatedly for treatment, c) and those who breathe their last in the hospital. For all these categories, nurses are the bedrock of hope. So, whatever be the situation, nurses should relate to patients and create in them happy memories. Job opportunities are aplenty for nurses. They could take up jobs in the country or abroad, or pursue higher education. They should develop language skills in Hindi, English, French and German for career growth. Nurses should keep good health to provide quality healthcare to patients, said Mrs Thomas.
